

Kate Hodgson

I believe that everyone has a story to share. For centuries, stories have been the way we connect and learn best from one another. Over the years my curiosity has led me to explore different forms of narrative communication through formal education and performance experience.

A certified training professional from OISE at U of T, I draw from my education in adult learning to design a curriculum and coaching program to help others understand the fundamentals of storytelling and how to develop and share their unique stories in a compelling narrative in their personal and professional lives.

A graduate of Second City, I've learned through experience the fundamentals of crafting a compelling story and connecting with the audience. Producer and host 9to5 Narrative, a live storytelling show showcasing unique and personal experiences. I've developed my own craft, and have performed in Dare!, True Stories Told Live, Raconteurs, Awkward and Caplanskis, as well as The Moth in Detroit.

Founder of 9to5 Narrative, I've designed and delivered storytelling workshops for The Government of Ontario, CSTD, TAVA and MS Society of Canada, IPF and helped several small business owners leverage the power of story in business.