

Mikhael Bornstein

Having worked in the arts, health, social service, and education sectors, Mikhael Bornstein has more than twenty years of experience as a professional fundraiser. Throughout his career he has been involved in all areas of fundraising but has developed special expertise in gift planning and direct marketing.

Mikhael is a frequent speaker at conferences across North America, including the AFP International Conference in Boston. He has also co-authored an article in CASE's Currents magazine. Mikhael is the Associate Director of Philanthropy at Ecojustice and teaches at George Brown College. He is completing a Master in Arts in Leadership at Royal Roads University.