What is Leave A Legacy™?

LEAVE A LEGACY™ is a national, community-based public awareness campaign of CAGP that encourages people to leave a gift through their will or another planned giving vehicle to a charity or cause that is meaningful to them.

LEAVE A LEGACY™ was first established in the United States by the Central Ohio Planners and licensed to the CAGP in Canada. For more than 10 years, the program was generously supported by Great-West Life, London Life and Canada Life as the LEAVE A LEGACY™ Founding National Development Sponsor. Today, the program is delivered through local CAGP Chapters.

Each local LEAVE A LEGACY™ program is distinct in its organization and delivery in order to serve the unique needs of its community while, collectively providing an important public awareness message. Supporters of local LEAVE A LEGACY™ programs include charitable organizations, professional estate and financial organizations, financial institutions, community foundations, other local funders and the media.

Although the program is active throughout the year, May is officially LEAVE A LEGACY™ Month.

YOU can change the course of cancer.

In addition to the cocktail of chemotherapy drugs she received, young Maia required several rounds of cranial radiation. Research in our province is funded exclusively by donors and it is years of donor-supported research which has laid the groundwork for Maia’s treatment.

Your bequest will further promising research and medical breakthroughs. You could fund the next important discovery that will lead to better outcomes for people like Maia, or someone you know and love.

Your bequest can support an area of specific interest to you, such as clinical trials, patient & family services or recruitment and retention of world-class staff. Thank you on behalf of the patients who will benefit from your generosity.

By including a bequest in your will or estate plan, you will help ensure future generations are taken care of.

A bequest is more than a donation. It is about perpetuating your values, beliefs and strong desire to make a difference. A bequest is a celebration of joy, values and life.

A bequest through your will provides you with an opportunity to make a significant impact upon your death. It also provides a deep sense of joy and partnership during your life – knowing your gift will significantly impact critical cancer research and patient care.

We would love to talk about CancerCare Manitoba’s bold vision of “a world without cancer” and how your gift will change the course of cancer in Manitoba.

Your bequest will make a difference.

Help ensure the best care for your community...

To explore the opportunity further please contact Patti Smith, Chief Development Officer, at 204-787-1758 to arrange a meeting.

Thank you for considering a place for CancerCare Manitoba Foundation in your will.

Determining how and with whom to share a charitable gift as part of a will requires plenty of deliberation and planning.

Thankfully, it’s a journey you need not embark upon alone, says the co-chair of the Leave A Legacy committee of the Manitoba chapter of the Canadian Association of Gift Planners (CAGP). In fact, Lynda Ruban says enlisting the help of a qualified investment professional can provide a broader perspective and a range of options that best suit a person’s wishes.

“A financial advisor’s role is to provide people with options and answer some of the tricky questions they might have…and give them an opportunity to think about things,” says Ruban, a former planned giving manager for the Canadian Cancer Society.

“The business of planned giving is really about having a conversation. Chances are once a person finds a financial advisor they are comfortable with they might find options or different vehicles for giving that they didn’t know were available to them before.”

Leave A Legacy co-chair Rena Molinari agrees. She says because a financial advisor knows all the ins and outs of the tax system, they can help devise a plan that allows an individual to maximize their charitable contribution while minimizing the amount of taxes that person or their survivors must pay.

For example, she says, a financial advisor may recommend that rather than selling shares and donating the proceeds to a charity that an individual simply transfer those shares to the charity. The charity can then sell the shares and provide a tax receipt for the amount the shares sold for, meaning the original shareholder can avoid paying capital gains.

“Your financial advisor would be the best person to guide you on a clearer path on what’s the best way for you and what vehicles are available to you,” says Molinari, past director of development for the Victoria General Hospital Foundation.

Ruban cautions that tax savings shouldn’t be the only factor people should consider when it comes to estate planning. While it’s certainly part of the equation, she suggests that people should make sure to choose a charity that aligns with their personal beliefs and values.

“A couple of years ago there were some American statistics that came out that said the reason people were leaving money for charity in their will was tax savings,” she says.

“A few years down the road it was shown that it’s not really about the tax savings. It’s really a commitment to a cause. It’s about their charity of choice. Tax savings and tax credits are further down the list.”

Molinari and Ruban both say it’s important for people to do their homework when it comes to choosing a charity they wish to bequeath a gift to. Ruban says that can include speaking directly to people who work for a charity to better understand the organization’s mission, vision and values.

“Working at a non-profit organization and as a fundraiser my position was to help donors navigate the organization and set them up with the right people,” Ruban says. “It was about developing long-term relationships. With those donors we would often go from handshakes at the start to hugs eventually. You almost became part of the family.”

Family is another important part of the planning process when it comes to making a bequest.

Molinari recommends making children and other family members aware of what your wishes are regarding your estate in the present rather than after your passing.

“It’s very important if you have children that they’re aware of what your wishes are. Sometimes things can get quite complicated if a child doesn’t know that a portion of an estate is going to be going to a charity,” she says. “Make sure that everybody close to you is aware of what your wishes are…and that you are leaving a bequest and where it’s going.”

Leave A Legacy is a national, community-based public awareness campaign sponsored by the CAGP. The campaign was successfully launched in Manitoba in 2000 and aims to encourage people to leave a gift through their will or another planned giving vehicle to a charity or cause that is meaningful to them.

Legacy gift will leave no one behind

You’ll never walk alone.

It’s a song that first appeared in the Broadway musical Carousel, that Jerry Lewis sang to close out his annual telethon for more than four decades, and is the anthem of English Premier League soccer’s Liverpool Football Club and other sports teams across the globe.

It’s a song that unites people. And to Charles Tax, it encapsulates the importance of building community and giving everyone a fair shot.

“We must provide opportunities for disadvantaged and vulnerable individuals to fully participate and excel in the general community,” he says. “Our motto must be, ‘You’ll never walk alone.’”

Mr. Tax’s younger sister Susan was born with Williams Syndrome, a rare genetic condition that is characterized by developmental delays and learning challenges, alongside a highly social personality and an affinity for music.

This experience has greatly influenced Mr. Tax’s outlook.

“Because of my sister, we’ve been a beneficiary of the wonderful services available in the community,” he says. “The community has done so much for her that we must give back.”

The mantra ‘You’ll never walk alone’ took on new meaning for Mr. Tax following a trip to the United Kingdom a few years ago. He took Susan to England to celebrate her 60th birthday, and they toured Anfield Stadium, home of Liverpool FC.

“When you watch a game, in a big game when (Liverpool is) playing an arch-rival like Manchester United or their Liverpool city neighbours Everton, they all sing in unison, the whole stadium,” he said.

Anfield Stadium holds more than 54,000 people and the community that is built through song is inspiring.

“We’re no better than the weakest link in our community. We must get them involved, so we’ve got to support them. They have to feel they’re part of the community. And we must be inclusive,” he said.

As Mr. Tax was thinking about his legacy, he knew he wanted to ensure all young people are given an opportunity to succeed.

“Youth is the city’s most important asset; its future,” he said. “Young people need good role models, positive experiences and a comforting environment.”

He decided to establish a Field of Interest Fund at The Foundation through a gift in his estate plan. His fund will provide young people from at-risk communities with recreational and cultural opportunities.

The Winnipeg Foundation, Canada’s first community foundation, has been helping donors like Mr. Tax leave a mark on our community and achieve their philanthropic goals for almost 100 years. Gifts to The Foundation are endowed, creating a permanent source of support for charities.

There are many ways to create your legacy through The Winnipeg Foundation. You can create a fund in your name, contribute to an existing fund, or support The Foundation’s leadership in a variety of areas.

Or you can plan now to give later through a gift in your will, such as a bequest, insurance policy, or retirement assets like RRSPs and TFSAs. These are just a few examples. Foundation staff are happy to meet with you to discuss your purpose and individualized legacy.

And you can join us for Bequest 101, an interactive workshop where you can learn how easy it is to leave a bequest in your Will. Look for our ad for details.

When you make a gift in your will to our community through The Winnipeg Foundation, you provide for the causes you hold close to your heart and for generations to come. For Good. Forever.

Helga McPherson’s Legacy Gift

But not every special occasion was this celebratory. Nearing midnight on New Year’s Eve, 1999, Helga lay in a hospital bed, recovering from a sudden stroke. Helga says this moment changed her life, igniting a passion for health care.

“If you look around, in every family there’s cancer, there’s heart attacks. If we help with donations, maybe it doesn’t have to get to this point,” says Helga.

Already a monthly donor to the HSC Foundation, Helga has now thoughtfully and generously left the Foundation a gift in her Will. Her extraordinary kindness will help improve what HSC can do for patients.

Despite her warmth, great sense of humour, and positive attitude, Helga has not had it easy. After a difficult childhood in Germany during World War II, Helga decided as a teenager to become the kind of person she needed when she was younger. “I’m always looking out for people not so well off. But I always can do more,” she says, rubbing her palms against her eyes. “I remember, even as a child, everything I had was always shared.”

Helga never had the chance to meet her father, a fallen soldier whose body has yet to be found, but believes her compassion and kindness comes from him. “The way I see myself now was the way other people say they saw him: his gentle nature, his looking out for other people.”

Stephan Webb, chair of the CAGP’s Manitoba chapter, encourages people to take the time to openly engage with their financial planner about their philanthropic plans.

Webb, who is also President and CEO of Entrust Financial Services, a Winnipeg-based financial advisory firm, said many people give, and the primary reason is that they want to give back and make an impact in their communities, particularly with something they’re passionate about, while also creating a tax benefit.

Donations up to $200 in Manitoba, for example, provide a 25.8 per cent tax credit while donations over $200 generate a 46.4 per cent tax credit.

“You give with your heart but when you use your head you make it smarter. Whenever you have a plan for anything, you’ll always have a better result,” he said.

The CAGP, which was formed in 1993, brings together charitable fundraisers and professional advisors while advocating for beneficial tax and legislative environments that encourage philanthropic giving.

About five per cent of the CAGP’s membership are financial advisors, another five per cent are lawyers, one per cent are accountants and the rest work for charities and foundations.

There’s no question mass affluent Canadians are quick to get out their chequebooks. According to CAGP figures, 74 per cent of them have donated between $1,000 and $10,000 in the past year. Another five per cent donated between $10,000 and $25,000.

The CAGP focuses on the strategic charitable-giving aspect of philanthropy and the planning work that goes on around it.

“Gift planning isn’t somebody making a donation at the door, giving at their place of worship, or giving towards a specific cause or capital campaign, I want to make sure they’re doing it in the most efficient manner possible,” he said.

Your financial plan is a collection of mini-plans for retirement, investment management, tax and your estate. Why is it so strange to have a charitable giving plan? Charitable giving involves gifts of money or assets with tax consequences so they’re all integrated,” Webb said.

Gift planning represents a double-barreled approach for both donors and charities. On one hand, it takes traditional fundraising campaigns to the next level by enabling them to raise funds and generate revenue in a much more efficient manner and attract and retain donors while also achieving an unparalleled return on investment.

Donors, meanwhile, are engaged in the process of funding their ultimate philanthropic wishes today and after their death.

Webb wants to encourage both would-be donors and professional advisors to become more involved with the process and each other.

Donors should be having discussions with their financial planners, lawyers and accountants to see how they might improve their philanthropic endeavours, and advisors should speak to their clients about the values and causes they cherish the most.

Webb is quick to note, he’s not running around trying to save the world, but he is trying to provide optimal service for his clients.

“When clients come in to my office, we have the discussion. ‘Do you give to charity?’ If they don’t, we politely move on. But for people who do, we look at how they’re giving so it can be more meaningful and impactful for them in the future,” he said.

Smarter giving

By Geoff Kirbyson for the Free Press

The vast majority of Canadians are actively engaged in philanthropy but they’re doing it without much — if any — help from their advisors.

And that’s puzzling to Stephen Webb, chairman of the Manitoba chapter of the Canadian Association of Gift Planners (CAGP).

He believes philanthropic planning should be part of an overall wealth management strategy that includes retirement, investment management, and estate and tax planning.

Considering that Winnipeggers are among the most generous people in Canada, if not the world, it behooves financial planners to be able to handle this side of their affairs, Webb said.

“I know that more than 90 per cent of my clients are engaged in a philanthropic activities every year, and whether that’s making a donation at the door, giving at their place of worship, or giving towards a specific cause or capital campaign, I want to make sure they’re doing it in the most efficient manner possible,” he said.

‘They gave us joy. They gave us our granddaughter’

Margaret Keillor has a very personal reason for choosing to support the Children’s Hospital’s Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU).

Kyla was born at 26 weeks, weighing only one pound, six ounces. She was taken immediately to the NICU, where she lived for over a month. As a tiny baby, Kyla needed feeding tubes. Nurses monitored her breathing and feeding constantly.

Her mother remembers, “The staff at NICU were amazing to our family. They always took the time to answer our questions and concerns. The nurses even chose sheets and hats that they thought would suit her.”

But Kyla pulled through. Now she’s an active girl who loves art, games, reading and swimming. She is always outside, and her favourite thing is camping. She has no health problems, and has caught up on the growth charts with other kids her age.

Grandma Margaret has remained deeply grateful to the NICU. When her husband passed away, she decided she wanted to support something that gave them both great joy.

And their greatest joy came from Kyla. So Margaret decided to include the Children’s Hospital Foundation of Manitoba in her will. She knows that her donation will help children in the NICU and their families, just like hers.

This is a wonderful way to support Manitoba’s children far into the future, and really is a legacy of great compassion.

As Margaret says, “I wanted to do something that gave us great joy. The NICU gave us joy, they gave us our granddaughter. Becoming a Papa was my husband’s proudest moment.”

If you would like to find out more about supporting the children who need us with a gift in your own will, please contact Tania Douglas at 204-787-4040 or email tdouglas3@hsc.mb.ca for details. It is a powerful yet easy way for you to support children’s health far into the future.

Because my wife loved working with kids, to honour her memory, I included a gift in my will.

Anyone can be a philanthropist

By Jennifer McFee for the Free Press

There’s no time like the present to consider leaving a charitable contribution to benefit others in the future.

“Our Leave A Legacy campaign is important because it’s the one voice we have to reach out so that people might consider leaving a gift in their will to a cause or a charity that they care about,” she says.

“That’s really important because the number of people leaving a gift to a charity in their will is quite low, so there’s a lot of opportunity that can happen simply by raising awareness.”

“One in four have indicated they would leave a gift to a charity in their will if they were asked. But the issue is that not enough organizations are asking and not enough professional advisors are suggesting that to their clients,” MacKenzie says.

“We work with fundraising professionals and we also work with financial advisors to help them understand how important it is to engage in philanthropy. We show them how this is an important level of service and support that they can provide to their clients.”

By reaching out to the professionals, CAGP can provide the information and resources they need to support donors in strategic charitable giving.

“Most charities are pretty strapped for money. They often struggle to raise funds to do their important work and they think they need to focus on what’s going to bring money in now. They feel like they don’t have time to focus on something that’s going to bring money in 10, 15, 25 years,” MacKenzie says.

“The Leave A Legacy program demonstrates to charities how easy it is and educates financial advisors who can provide that window of opportunity to their clients.”

For donors, MacKenzie suggests they work with charities in advance if they have the chance.

“Often charities are surprised at gifts they get in someone’s will since only about one in 10 donors disclose to the charity ahead of time. We encourage people to let the charity know in advance because it gives them a chance to say thank you,” she says.

“I think a lot of times people have this notion that you have to be wealthy to give and that’s not the case, especially in terms of leaving a gift in your will. This is a time when anybody can leave a gift.”

“Also, if you want to designate it for something special, the charity can help you figure out where their need is the greatest and where you can donate to something that you really care about.”

“I think a lot of times people have this notion that you have to be wealthy to give and that’s not the case, especially in terms of leaving a gift in your will. This is a time when anybody can leave a gift,” she says.

“One of the strategies we encourage people to do is to look after themselves as they age and look after their kids — but once that’s looked after, is there room to give? It’s something that’s really easy to do and it’s a very, very powerful way to say something about your life as an individual and how you care about community.”

At this year’s national CAGP conference, about 350 people from across the country gathered in Winnipeg from April 11 to 13 for the sold-out event.

Attendees included professional advisors, lawyers, estate planners, accountants and fundraisers for charities, who had the chance to learn about the tax advantages of giving. Other themes included best practices in terms of donor stewardship and education about how to give in a more strategic way to maximize the impact of a donation for a charity as well as for the donors themselves.

“CAGP is there to help individuals identify a cause or a charity that they care about and connect them with the fundraising professionals in their community. For many, that’s a global lens these days. For others, they want to make a gift that impacts their community where they lived,” she says.

“The professionals involved with CAGP are ready to help. Any gift is usually money very well spent in a charity and it can have a real impact.”

Be the difference.
The business leaders of tomorrow need your help today.

Why your will is important

Your will or testament guarantees your property and assets will be regulated according to your desires. Without a will, there is no mechanism in place to make a bequest. Below are some steps you should take to ensure that your wishes are granted:

1. Make a detailed list of your assets (financial, real estate, vehicles, jewelry, collectibles, musical instruments, etc.)
2. Make a list of organizations or causes you would like to support.
3. Set up an appointment with your professional advisor (financial analyst, attorney, or planned giving officer) to discuss your options. Your professional advisor can help you decide which option(s) will work best for you and your family.

Donating to CMU a wise investment
By Aaron Epp

For Hugo Peters, donating to CMU is a wise investment because it means contributing to the lives of students. “I've invested in all kinds of things in my life … some of which made money, but I've never regretted investing in people,” says Peters. “It’s the best investment because it’s long-term. These are people who are going to make the world move along in directions that are good.” Peters was thrilled to see his grandson graduate from CMU in 2017, 54 years after he himself graduated from one of the university’s founding colleges. “I was hoping of course he would have that same life-changing, redirecting experience I had that is about more than just education — it’s really (about) forming who you become,” he says.

It’s About Ability

It’s about children with disabilities having the same opportunity to play, learn and be independent just like everyone else.

Your donation to the Children’s Rehabilitation Foundation will ensure children living with disabilities have specialized equipment and modified recreation programs they need today and in their future. When you leave a legacy with the Children’s Rehabilitation Foundation, you are changing lives.

Please consider leaving a legacy today.

Assurons notre avenir

Université de Saint-Boniface célèbre 200 ans d'éducation en français au Manitoba. Faites un don planifié et aidez à nos étudiants et étudiantes à atteindre de nouveaux sommets.
In 1988, Judy Balabas' mother flew from Flin Flon to Winnipeg to receive two heart valve replacements at St. Boniface Hospital. Nearly 25 years later, in May of 2012, Balabas herself also had to have a heart valve replaced at the Hospital.

From pre-operative meetings with doctors explaining her procedure, to post-operative care from the cardiac team at St. Boniface Hospital, Balabas knew she had a tremendous amount of support throughout the entire process.

"The care I received was just phenomenal. Everything was explained to me so well, so I knew what to expect. And the staff who worked with me went above and beyond."

She fondly recalls staff bringing her a cup of coffee after she was transferred from the Intensive Care Unit to her recovery room after surgery. This special touch, among many others, went beyond the call of duty. Allowing two best friends, Sharon Campbell and Jean Moor, to be present during pre-op and post-op meetings assisted in calming her fears. Having a strong support system in place ensured that she always felt cared for.

With a healed and joyful heart, Balabas decided to leave a gift in her will to St. Boniface Hospital Foundation.

"The cardiac research being done right now at St. Boniface Hospital is so crucial, " says Balabas. "It's really important to me – I mean, look at the quality of life I have now."

This is just one example of Balabas' generous spirit. She not only donates to various causes each year, including St. Boniface Hospital Foundation, but she also donates her time playing piano and bringing joy to residents in nursing homes in Winnipeg and Stonewall.

Balabas always knew she wanted to be a music teacher – she decided that would be her career when she was just eight years old.

Growing up in Flin Flon, Judy moved to Winnipeg to attend teacher's college and went on to teach music and French for 28 years. After retiring, she was tired and looking for a way to de-stress. Music, as always, was her therapy.

When she saw the advertisement for a volunteer piano player position at various personal care homes in the city, she knew she would be a good fit. It's now been a pastime for Balabas and her friends, Jacky Molyneux and Joan Zaretsky, for nearly a decade.

"It's just been so rewarding, " Balabas said. "You're giving your time. But, you know what? You're so fulfilled by the interactions."

Balabas' healed heart is both a happy and giving heart, and St. Boniface Hospital Foundation is grateful for her gift, which will help patients at the Hospital for generations to come.

Honouring Kim’s work

Dr. Kathleen Jones and her late wife, professor Kim Clare, were both very successful in the academic world, eventually pursuing their career goals with the University of Manitoba. For the last 20 years of her career Kim worked as the director of the Inner City Social Work Program, a program designed to support students who have traditionally faced systemic barriers common to inner-city life experience such as poverty, racism, school failure and marginalization. All of these factors prevent accessibility to post-secondary education.

During her tenure, Kim worked hard to ensure the option for part-time study was included, so those whose life commitments wouldn’t allow for full-time study could nonetheless pursue a career in social work.

Upon Kim’s untimely death in 2014, her friends and family wanted to honour her memory and contribute to fulfilling her vision of increased accessibility to higher education. Ultimately, the Kim Clare bursary was established, which offers support specifically for part-time students in the Inner City Social Work program.

Her unwavering commitment to her students, colleagues and the profession of social work had a deep impact on the community; she is remembered with great admiration, respect and love.

Kathy continues to make gifts to the Kim Clare Bursary and has also included a gift in her will. She feels that “Kim would be proud to know that her work over her entire lifetime is being remembered and supported into the future.”

ABOUT GIFT PLANNING
Strategic charitable giving is a focused and financially strategic approach to philanthropy that results in maximum benefits for both the charity and individual donor.

WHO IS A GIFT PLANNER?
Gift planners are leaders in Canada’s charitable community. They play key roles expanding the fundraising options available to charitable organizations. Gift planners are impacting Canada’s philanthropic landscape in a meaningful way, providing current and prospective donors with new and innovative ways of achieving their philanthropic dreams. Gift planners are experts with a unique body of knowledge regarding a range of giving options, such as bequests, gifts of securities, gifts of insurance. They are informed and conversant in the challenging technical aspects of the various giving vehicles and the potential financial benefits of each. Gift planners embody or strive for a range of technical and enabling core competencies that reflect the skills, expertise and qualities essential.

YOUR STORY. YOUR LEGACY.

The Endowment Book of Life offers you an opportunity to leave a historical and financial legacy to the community. Make a promise to leave a bequest to the Jewish Foundation of Manitoba and your family story is inscribed in the Endowment Book of Life. Launched in 1998, the EBOL now has over 800 community stories.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

There are absolutely no fees to participate in the Endowment Book of Life.

You make a promise to leave a bequest – this promise welcomes you into the EBOL program.

You can leave an undesignated bequest that will be used for grants and scholarships at the discretion of the Foundation.

Or, you can designate your bequest to support specific charities, programs, services, or scholarships.

PROFESSIONAL ADVISORS
Professional advisors work in strategic charitable gift planning in the fields of accounting, law, insurance, financial planning and investment planning, providing philanthropic advice to their clients as current or prospective donors and to charitable organizations.

WHY IS GIFT PLANNING SO IMPORTANT?
Gift planning expands on traditional fundraising campaigns, enabling charities to raise funds, generate revenue more efficiently and attract and retain donors while achieving an unparalleled return on investment.

Gift planning engages donors in the wonderful process of giving by encouraging donors to explore their ultimate dreams, their financial plans today and after death, and most importantly, their philanthropic goals and wishes.

Gift planning encourages donors to consider their lasting legacy as well as their current and final wishes, encouraging them to continually explore these issues, utilizing tools provided by charitable gift planners or professional advisors.

CODE OF ETHICS
All members of the CAGP are required to commit to and abide by a stringent code of ethics which outlines principles, guidelines and practices they will adhere to in their relations with current and prospective donors.

THE CANADIAN ASSOCIATION OF GIFT PLANNERS, MANITOBA CHAPTER

CAGP Manitoba is the province’s premier organization for fundraisers and professional advisors — lawyers, financial advisors and accountants — to network, share ideas and develop their knowledge of current issues in gift planning.

The Chapter hosts regular educational meetings where members connect with their colleagues and hear from expert speakers. We encourage anyone with an interest in fund development to attend our meetings, which will help you to serve your donors or clients better. Members of the CAGP are given a discount on the registration fee and are given opportunities and insight into upcoming events throughout the province.

The chapter also runs an inspiring LEAVE A LEGACY™ awareness program designed to encourage people to leave a gift through their will or any other planned giving method to a charity or non-profit organization of their choice.

If you have any questions, please feel free to contact Stephen Webb, CAGP Manitoba Chapter chair, at 204-272-9670 or stephen@entrustfinancialservices.ca

Making a difference

Did you know with the use of an iPad, a student who is blind can photograph class material at their desk and have it read back in a different format? In the past, blind students sat at the back of the class using closed-circuit TV. Now, they are included and have the same opportunities.

Just ask Robb Hempel. Robb, a mechanic by trade, lost his sight at the age of 33 due to diabetic retinopathy. Approaching his vision loss as a challenge, through CNIB he learned to read Braille, re-learned to cook and sorted out how to get around Winnipeg on his own.

Beyond those challenges, Robb wanted back into the job market, in a meaningful job. Robb, along with Shop CNIB staff member Chloe Porter, devised a system that allows people of any vision level to work in any part of the CNIB store — often using the technology sold in the store. Now, CNIB provides a work experience program through Shop CNIB to offer Manitobans with sight loss the skills, confidence and resources to find meaningful paid work. As for Robb, he now works full-time at a job he loves and still finds time to cook and volunteer.

Rossbrook House Foundation Legacy Circle

Bill and Maureen Watchorn believe that the work that Rossbrook House does is important. And that is why they have been so involved with Rossbrook for the past 20 years. It’s also why they have made plans to continue their support.

In the late 1990s, Bill helped to recruit a small group of business leaders to raise funds for an expansion to Rossbrook House. Bill was the first Chair of the Rossbrook House Foundation in 2006 and was a member of that board until 2016.

“We witnessed first-hand the great work Rossbrook House was doing in the community and the great impact it was having on the kids,” Bill said.

“The kids from Rossbrook House were very much on our minds,” Bill said when he and Maureen revised their wills in 2012.

“It was a short leap for Maureen and me to include a legacy gift for the Rossbrook House Foundation in our wills.”

Their planning and generosity will benefit the children and youth who walk through the doors of Rossbrook House, for many years to come. “Rossbrook House is a very valuable organization in our city. We feel our legacy gift is the best way we can continue to support it,” Bill said.

For more information about the Rossbrook House Foundation Legacy Circle or planned giving, call Tom Thompson at 204-949-4097.
