

Leilani Kagan

Leilani is a partner in the tax and estate-planning group at Thompson Dorfman Sweatman LLP. Her practice involves both planning and implementation of corporate restructuring, business succession strategies, and working with clients and their professional advisors to effect tax-planning strategies. She also works with individuals and their advisors to implement estate-planning, trust planning and charitable gift strategies for both family succession and philanthropic purposes. Her practice includes advisory and compliance work with not-for-profit organizations and registered charities, including private and public foundations.